BREAST CANCER AWARENESS DAY & SIXTEEN DAYS OF ACTIVISM

Breast Cancer, according to the World Health Organization is currently the most common type of cancer worldwide. Although the prevalence of breast cancer is still more common in developed nations, it is also rising in underdeveloped nations, including many African nations like Nigeria, Uganda, and Ghana. The prevention and treatment of breast cancer are urgent public health concerns in sub-Saharan Africa. In sub-Saharan Africa, the five-year survival rate for breast cancer is a pitiful 40%, compared to over 90% in the majority of high-income nations. The majority of breast cancer patients in nations with successfully lowered mortality rates are identified when the disease is still more likely to be cured. High mortality rates are caused by late-stage diagnosis and insufficient access to high-quality breast cancer care in sub-Saharan Africa. Most women are detected at advanced stages, which are more challenging, expensive, and less likely to result in a cure. In Africa, one of the main obstacles to breast cancer detection and treatment is a lack of knowledge about the risk factors and symptoms of the condition. Due to the high prices or social considerations, those who are aware may be reluctant to seek therapy.

The Intervention

Against this background of the menace of breast cancer to societies, the All-Africa Students Union, in collaboration with the National Union of Graduate Students, seek to bridge the knowledge gap with respect to breast cancer and render services that can benefit women through the following activities;

Health Sensitization and awareness creation

Given that several health problems stem from inadequate knowledge about preventive measures, interventions that promote early breast cancer detection must be targeted at public education on practices that reduces the risk of breast cancer as well as ways to conduct self-awareness checks and promote early screening. Against this background, the All-Africa Students Union, in collaboration with the National Union of Graduate Students will provide lectures on key topics related to breast cancer. This activity will be implemented through radio engagements and a walk to share fliers with people along the streets of Accra.

Health Screening

Due to the limited availability of health facilities coupled with inadequate human resources in the health sector in rural areas, persons in these areas cannot ascertain their health status. This impedes their ability to take action to ensure good health and increases the number of hidden diseases or organ malfunctions. Due to this possibility, the All-Africa Students Union, in collaboration with National Union of Graduate Students and a health entity will conduct a health screening for the beneficiaries of the project to identify the various health problems faced by these people and prescribe appropriate treatment for the health-related challenges.

Expected Outcomes

Increase awareness on breast cancer ●

Breast Screening for early detection ●

Reduce Mortality Rate of Breast Cancer ●

Project Area and Beneficiaries

The project will be carried out in the city of Accra, Ghana specifically Madina and Legon. These areas were chosen because our target to reach out to the market women and students within the catchment areas of Legon and its environs. Also, these areas form part of the Greater Accra region of Ghana which records significant number of cases of breast cancer thereby limiting the propensity of residents to access health care.

16 Days of Activism against Gender-Based Violence

The 16 Days of Activism against Gender-Based Violence is an annual global campaign that begins on November 25, the International Day for the Elimination of Violence Against Women, and lasts until December 10, Human Rights Day. People and groups from all over the world utilize it as an organizing tactic to demand the prevention and elimination of violence against women and girls. The global theme for this year's 16 Days of Activism against Gender-Based Violence, which will run from 25 November to 10 December 2022, is "UNITE! Activism to end violence against women and girls".

Since the advent of COVID-19, 45% of women reported that they or a woman they know has experienced a form of VAWG. 7 in 10 women said they think that verbal or physical abuse by a partner has become more common. 6 in 10 felt that sexual harassment in public spaces has worsened. All kinds of violence against women and girls have become more severe as a result of the COVID-19 epidemic, but it has also increased the urgency which UN Women, and other organisations such as the All-Africa Students Union have taken advantage of this development to drive and secure policy changes that are anticipated to have long-term, trajectory-altering effects on decrease in violence. More than 1 in 3 women are believed to be affected by VAWG, which continues to be the most prevalent and systemic human rights violation in the world. A number that has essentially not altered over the past ten years. According to contemporary statistics, a woman or girl is typically killed by someone in her own home every 11 minutes.

In view of this, the All-Africa Students Union joins the global call to eliminate all forms of violence against women and girls through the following activities.

1. 25th November,2022 - Engage students from the University of Professional Studies and University of Ghana on their knowledge, experience and contribution towards elimination of all forms of violence against women and girls.
2. 2nd December 2022 - Host a program at Aburi Girls Senior High School in the Eastern Region with resource persons to educate the girls on violence against women and girls and the need for them to speak out when they fall victim. Counselors will be made available to girls who are willing to use their services.
3. 25th November 2022- 10th December,2022- Coordinate orange events and activities across our member states.
4. 8th December,2022- Feature stories from survivors, activists and women's rights advocates to highlight their critical leadership role in ending VAWG.
5. 10th December 2022- Radio and TV engagements to sensitize the general public on the need to for all to become on board to eliminate sexual and gender-based violence from our societies.
